CENTENNIAL WEST CLEAN LINE

The Centennial West Clean Line will transport 3,500 megawatts of new renewable power generation from eastern New Mexico and deliver directly to California. In 2012, New Mexico and Arizona will celebrate their respective 100 year tenure as states in the Union. The name "Centennial West" honors the significance of these two states and the successful arrival of the 100 year anniversary for each, while setting the course for the next century for the southwest: clean, renewable energy to power this rapidly growing region in the United States.
